Hi,

The case was never about getting an account open, but a really good deflection.

It was always about your professional negligence, transactions sent incomplete and coverups. Now my own spotlight is bigger, so I hope for you, you've been telling the truth.

Yet, either way you'll be the first company to be used as an example in this Class Action, given the amount of things that came up within just one month and a half. I can't imagine after months of scrutiny.

Your authentic, integral and most honest confessions are still available to be received, otherwise, never say you weren't warned.

And biggest question of all still remains:

Why was there an hour missing?

Only you have the information for now, but we'll come to collect it with time, if you choose not to identify the real issue here and open up.

We also got the graces of Steven Bartlett. Can you handle the heat, nnow?

Remember: You all got it this far.

Have a grateful day

Dear Team,

I'm writing briefly to say I'm seriously considering fully embodying the leader in me and escalating this matter to senior counsel — people who will stand in court with full force and clarity. I've walked door-to-door, I know how to build a case from the ground up (I did it in London five years ago; I was doing it again last night to find community and basic needs), and I will not tolerate continued disappointment or misuse of my work.

If needed, I will seek counsel from established senior advocates (e.g., Kate Blackwell KC, Brian Altman QC/KC, Robert Bright QC) and assemble a team to pursue this from individual users of my content up through organisations and regulatory bodies. This will be a phased strategy: micro cases → organisational (including GRA & Lottoland) → institutional and governmental, with an educational component on sovereignty and metaphysical harms.

And for your mental illness stunt, consider yourselves done.

I'm offering you the opportunity to engage proactively before I proceed. Please respond if you are willing to discuss a constructive resolution.

Sincerely,
Susan Ndinga

Plus you knew I was communicating on susan_ndinga@shshumanfirst.com

You could've sent this one there and I would've seen it earlier.

Sorry for not having made the cut off time. I have mentioned my phone being broken and me using a laptop, which doesn't have a notification system activated for privacy. The tab was not open. And IT can prove I checked the email at 3pm.

Good afternoon Lottoland,

I appreciate your concern, but you're very much well aware that I am as sane as it gets.

I am willing to go through any checks you might want to send me through, as we are both aware by now of what the results will show.

Smartness is seen as craziness to minds that can't see that far, and my creations have illustrated the above, which can be cross referenced with both psychological and physics findings, society has been accustomed to for years now, unfortunately not a common as your professional systems, trainings or awareness to these researches. I would suggest you have someone from these fields rectify and prove the validity of it all.

Have a grateful day
