Dear Michael (and team),

I hope this finds you well. I'm Susan Ndinga Wright — multi-dimensional physicist, founder of 4Honeth (The Trinity of Light) — and I was struck by your candor and moral clarity during your conversation with School of Hard Knocks. When you asked, "Is it for the kids?" you nailed the kind of straight, values-first reasoning that actually changes systems. That's exactly why I'm reaching out.

I'm building a project to formally bring metaphysics — and the hard, demonstrable physics behind it — into legal frameworks, jurisdictions, and constitutional thinking. Other industries are already being reshaped by these discoveries; law is overdue. Without grounded, well-regulated tools to channel people's spiritual and perceptual expansions, society risks chaos. My mission is to design protocols that protect the vulnerable, regulate new realities responsibly, and create a safer Earth for my own future child.

Why I'm contacting you

- You've successfully negotiated with government and high-stakes actors, and you carry the kind of practical wisdom and heart that this work requires.
- You model integrity and authentic decision-making; your "for the kids" ethos aligns with the outcome I want: legal systems that serve human flourishing.
- I would value your insight into strategy, negotiation, and who in government or legal circles might be open to pilot frameworks that merge metaphysical evidence with legal standards.

What I'm proposing

A short exploratory conversation (20–30 minutes) to:

1. Share a concise overview of the 4Honeth framework and how metaphysical principles translate into verifiable, regulatory language. I pardon in advance if appears scattered, not just it is quite multidimensional and unheard of, while coming across as wild as the Mad Hatter, it would also be the first conversation I would have with someone who wants to do right by the future of our youth.. I mean I'm 26, call me youthful still, yet also look at layering and connecting all of our ways to create more equilibrium frequencies of existence.
2. Discuss practical pathways — pilot jurisdictions, advisory boards, and negotiation strategies with government or legal partners.
3. Explore whether you (or an adviser on your team) might offer guidance, make an introduction, or collaborate on a strategic approach that brings this to policymakers in a way that's safe, pragmatic, and children-centered.

Why this matters now

Among many other facts, we've seen IP, Resources and systems' weaponization that don't deserve existence, if not in a context that expands our consciousness at large, and other abuses that exploit regulatory blind spots. What if I was to tell you about a future where we don't even need to defy taxes, which I was getting ready to set funds for, as they will be removed and bounced back to the Governments, as they're the ones who work for us, yet have continuously breached their roles, and for every year they have not chosen to discuss or allowed the expansions of our ruling systems, by incorporating physics, is a law they were guilty of all crimes enacted, as everything that has ever happened, has happened under their professional negligence, and I'm just someone confident enough to try the leap, hoping to build the best team possible to work with.

I have the heart, fighting to receive my jackpot with the same company I manifested through the laws of the universe, only to say, soon the funds, but I lack the network, experience of the old ways in depth, and the physical protection, which I'm balancing with my mental prowess.

My work reframes those blind spots as solvable design problems: clearer standards rooted in measurable phenomena, accountability mechanisms, and educational scaffolding so people can expand without harm. That's not hypothetical — it's already impacting other industries and it needs to be anchored into law before it becomes destabilizing.

I would love to propose the possibility of seeing what possibilities this could arise, or 30-minute windows that suit you and I'll accommodate. I was born in Italy, and couldn't help but notice il cognome, I guess a dust of nepotism never fails I

Thank you for the work you do and for holding space for practical integrity. If this resonates, I'd be honored to speak and learn from your wisdom about how to bring this important work into the legal sphere in a way that protects real people — our children and their futures.

I've IP'd myself, my story and my existence, to build a case for sovereign beings, I give you the consent to share any of my communications, as I understand the importance of this possible connection.
